The Shiny Bald Heads in the Senate

FROM A GALLERY VIEWED

Statesmen Who Are Entitled to Seats in the Front Rows of Variety Theatres—A Rear View.

Looking from the press gallery of the senate upon the members of that august body to-day during the discussion of an important bill, I was struck with the remarkable similarity in the appearance of Senator Mitchell, of New York, and Senator Blount, of New Jersey. The front seat in the senate gallery is about twenty feet higher than the desks of the senators, and the two distinguished gentlemen mentioned, who occupy seats in the back row on the democratic side, were about fifty feet from me. Both of them were engaged in writing letters, and as they bent over their desks their smooth, bald heads were strikingly similar in size, shape, and I almost said, alike in expression.

Two other bald heads, directly opposite, on the back row on the republican side of the chamber, were in striking contrast. Senator Carey, of Wyoming, and Senator Shoup, of Idaho, might readily be mistaken for each other if only the tops of their heads were photographed. Hill and Hodges have long, narrow heads, while Carey and Shoup carry their brains in larger, rounder skulls which look much like elliptical water balloons. In the houses of representatives the gentlemen who have been honored with seats in that popular body are, in the main, very much younger than the potent, grave and revered signifiers who deliberate in the senate. This is probably because the representatives are selected for two years, and frequent changes are thereby made; while senators are elected for six years and each of them generally has two terms, so that they are more apt to grow old in the service.

Senator Harris, of Tennessee, has been in public life so long that, but for his bristling mustache, he would be entirely devoid of capillary ornamentation, and he had probably by this time forgotten how he used to look before nature deprived him of hair. Senator Allison, of Iowa, who has been a member of the senate for eighteen years, still retains a luxuriant suit of hair, and his face is almost entirely covered with a dark-brown beard which has been rapidly growing during the recent session. Senator Hoar, of Massachusetts, has a complexion as florid and pink as that of a baby in floral dresses, and the red corpuscles in his blood are so plentiful that his bald cranium is as well colored as his face. His colleague, Senator Davis, still wears a little shock of hair upon the apex of his cranium, and supplements the loss of top-knot with a short cropped, bristling beard which is rapidly becoming snow-white. Ex-senator Ingalls was distinguished during his last six years in the senate by a most magnificent crop of silvery hair which seemed almost translucent from the gallery distance. His successor, the celebrated Peffer, not only has a full suit of black hair, but a very handsome long, brown beard, which has been the subject of tests from the pens of political scribblers. He is a very worthy and able man. Senator Wilson, of Iowa, who thirty years ago was the most vigorous debater in the house of representatives and a very athletic, handsome man, is to-day one of the quietest members of the senate, and he looks upon his snow-white hair and beard he would not be recognized as the aggressive man of former days.

Senator Manderson, of Nebraska, who had a brilliant career as a soldier and who has been in public life for well-nigh forty years, still wears a full suit of dark brown hair, and with his fresh complexion, large mustache and small goatee looks not more than thirty years of age. Senator Butler, of South Carolina, a perfect Chesterfield upon the floor of the senate and probably the handsomest man on the democratic side of the chamber, has a rapidly thinning crown of silver and a bristling snow-white mustache. With one well-made artificial

He is always clean shaven, serene, occupied in writing, usually leaning back in his chair, gazing upon the ceiling, so that with his high forehead, big eyes, large chin and thick neck he looks from the gallery like an amplitude of face. Senator Mitchell, of Oregon, is trying to look like himself again. For ten years or more we have known him as a tall, well-formed, handsome man with a long black beard. One year ago for some reason he deplored himself of his whiskers, and came to the senate one morning looking like a beardless boy. The messenger at the main door refused to permit him to enter the chamber until he smiled and spoke his name. Even then the faithful old employee feared that it must be a long-lost brother instead of Mitchell himself. He is now permitting his beard to grow again, and, although it is short and stubby and anything but pretty, it makes the genial and likeable senator from the Pacific seem much more like the man we have known and liked for so many years. Senator Hamblough, of South Dakota, looks more like Jack Haverly, the famous minstrel and theatrical manager, than any genuine member of Haverly's family could look. His hair is thick and glossy and his mustache large, strong and nearly the color which Titian loved to paint. He is one of the youngest men ever elected to the upper house of congress, and quite naturally chafes with a brother senator nearly his own age.

Senator Dabbs, of Idaho, served one term in the house of representatives with Hamblough, and they were elected to the senate by their respective states at the same time. Their seats are contiguous, but it would make no difference to these senatorial friends if their seats were far apart, for they would get together every day, either upon the floor of the chamber or in the cloak room, and always lunch together in the senate restaurant. Senator Kyle, of South Dakota, is probably the tallest man in the senate to-day, and undoubtedly the youngest, being only thirty-seven years of age. He is not only tall but well proportioned, has a kindly face, and his education and training for the ministry are indicated

SENATOR MITCHELL REFUSED ADMISSION, constantly in his manner among his friends. Senator Gordon, of Georgia, who succeeded Mr. Brown, is no longer the vigorous and handsome man the older correspondents knew when he left the senate ten years ago. His black hair is worn but little longer than the regulation cut, and his smooth-shaven cheeks lack somewhat of the ruddy glow of youth and health. Still he is a very active and valuable member of the senate. Senator Pugh, of Alabama, a large and almost portly man, has but few of his dark-brown locks remaining. Until Mr. White, of Louisiana, took his seat in the senate, Mr. Pugh wore the largest smooth-shaven face in that body.

Senator George, of Mississippi, is probably the most ragged character, physically, excepting Senator Coke, of Texas. Mr. George is not a very tall man, but has a well-knit, vigorous frame, and his hair and beard are still and wiry. Senator Coke, of Texas, is a tall, broad-shouldered man, with a snow-white beard. When he becomes in earnest and speaks as forcefully as he can, the senate walls and ceiling almost crack and crack again with the volume of sound. Senator Culom, of Illinois, would look very much like Abraham Lincoln if he were taller and more homely. His entire head and face and neck are covered with black hair, rapidly growing gray, but his upper lip is smooth-shaven. Anybody can see that Senator Pettigrew, of South Dakota, is a nervous man. His full beard and full suit of hair are very dark, but no looker could photograph him, for he is constantly on the move, and so many demands are made upon him that he can seldom remain long in his seat at one time, because he is called to the makeshift room, to the waiting room, to the cloak room or committee room, to meet in conference friends and legislators on public business.

Mr. Voorhees, of Indiana, looks like a tall specimen of the Wabash, bowled and banded and silvered by the blasts and frosts of time. His strong voice and bright eyes unaffected and undimmed by the flight of years, alone remain of the powerful physique of former days. The senior senator from Ohio looks no older than when I first saw him on the floor of the senate before he became secretary of the treasury. John Sherman is, in the judgment of the press gallery, the ablest statesman in all respects upon the floor of the senate. His colleague, Senator Brice, who sits upon the democratic side, is a short, well proportioned man with a face which is noted for its somatic features. He has a heavy suit of fine, black hair and a heavy, coarse, wiry, red beard. He is a responsible gentleman among his friends, and generous to the poor. Senator Sherman, of Maryland, is as smooth physically as he is intellectually. He is the kindest politician of his party, and at the same time an experienced statesman. His sharp features and smooth shaven face, his hair, parted and smoothed like the locks of a hotel clerk, and his perfect fitting

IRROQUOIS CLUB HOUSE.

The elegant structure to be erected by Chicago Democrats. An illustration is presented herewith of the new building to be erected for the Irroquois club at the northwest corner of Michigan avenue and Dearborn street, Chicago. John Addison is the architect. Work will not be commenced until December of the present year, as the club cannot get possession of the ground, now occupied by the Brunswick hotel, until that time. The structure will front 110 feet on Adams street and 54 feet on Michigan avenue. It will be ten stories high and will cost $450,000.

The walls will be of red or brown granite for a portion of their height, but will be continued to the cornice in terra cotta, leading to a tiled roof, broken artistically into gables. The main entrance will be from Adams street, leading over a mosaic flooring to the interior of the structure. An open court will extend upward from the level of the second floor. At the eighth floor there will be a balcony around this court. A marble staircase will lead to the second floor, on which will be located the principal rooms of the club. On the third floor will be a large reception room, which is to be elaborately decorated and used on formal occasions. On the fourth and fifth floors will be rooms for members. Fronting Michigan avenue on the sixth floor will be a large ball-room. The dining-rooms will be on the eighth and ninth floors on the Michigan avenue frontage. The kitchen and servants' quarters will be on the tenth floor.

There is a fashion in everything, and this applies to the manner of announcing betrothals as much as to the style of the resultant wedding. In days gone by the fair fiancée used, blushing and tremulous, to whisper the secret to her bosom friend; and relations, after a decorous little delay, to make sure, as it were, that the thing was really settled, imparted the news in formal and carefully expressed announcements. But now the wooer has barely time to break the knees of his trousers dusted before the story is blazoned forth before the fashion of a girl who lately at a fancy ball told all her friends at the top of her voice: "I'm engaged to Lord Reggie, that's him, the big Memphisophile over yonder. He asked me to have him an hour ago, in the billiard-room!"—Chicago Tribune.

Books Handled by Machinery. In the library of congress, which has over 650,000 bound volumes the books will hereafter be handled almost entirely by machinery. Orders will be sent to the bookstacks, and books brought from them to the desk for distribution by trays suspended from endless chains, the latter being made to travel by means of an engine in the basement. The mechanism will be noiseless and invisible also; the carriers going beneath the floor of the great central reading-room, to and fro between the librarians' desk and the bookstacks. Every arriving tray will dump itself automatically at the first desk. Likewise, in taking volumes back, each tray will spit its contents, of its own accord, at a certain tier.

A Common Sense Remedy. In the matter of curatives what you want is something that will do its work while you continue to do yours—a remedy that will cure you no inconvenience nor interfere with your business. Such a remedy is Alcock's Pore Plaster. These plasters are not an experiment; they have been in use for over thirty years, and their value has been attested by the highest medical authorities, as well as by testimonials from those who have used them. They require no change of diet and are not affected by wet or cold. Their action does not interfere with labor or business; you can toil and yet be cured while hard at work. There are no poisons in them; the youngest, the oldest, the most delicate person of either sex can use them with great benefit. Beware of imitations, and do not be deceived by misrepresentations. Ask for Alcock's, and let no solicitation or explanation induce you to accept a substitute.

These figures represent the number of bottles of Dr. J. C. Woodbury's Food for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, which were sold in the United States from March, 1891, to March, 1892. Two millions, two hundred and twenty-two bottles sold in one year, and each and every bottle was sold with a positive guarantee that money would be refunded if satisfactory results did not follow its use. The secret of its success is plain. It never disappoints and can always be depended on as the very best remedy for coughs, colds, etc. Price 10c and 25c. At Peck Bros' drug store.

Just the Thing. This is an expression the traveling public generally use when they find something that is exactly what they want. The expression applies directly to the Wisconsin Central Lines, which is now admitted by all to be "The Route" from Chicago to St. Paul, Minneapolis, Ashland, Duluth and all points in the northwest. Their double daily train service and fine equipment offers inducements which cannot be surpassed.

This is the only line running both through Pullman First Class and Tourist Sleepers from Chicago to Pacific Coast Points without change.

That Terrible Cough. In the morning, hurried or difficult breathing, raising phlegm, tightness in the chest, quickened pulse, chilliness in the evening or sweats at night, all or any of these things are the first stages of consumption. Dr. Acker's English Cough Remedy will cure these fearful symptoms, and is sold under a positive guarantee by White & White, 99 Monroe-st.

Prof. Niel. Government chemist, writes: I have carefully analyzed your "Royal Ruby Port Wine," brought me in the open market, and certify that I found the same absolutely pure and well aged. This wine is especially recommended for its health restoring and building up properties; it strengthens the weak and restores lost vitality; particularly adapted for convalescents, the aged, nursing mothers and those reduced and weakened by overwork and worry. Be sure you get "Royal Ruby" $1 per quart bottle, plus 60 cents. Sold by White & White and Thum Bros. & Schmidt, druggists.

A Wonderful Statement. Proprietors of Dullam's Great German Remedy. I have for the past two years been troubled with a serious and very severe Liver and Stomach difficulty. Have had advice and medicine from our very best physicians and only to be temporarily relieved. Some of my friends persuaded me to try your Great German Remedy for the Blood, Stomach and Kidneys and to my surprise after using three bottles I feel like a new man. If you desire you can use my name in print or by reference in any of the Grand Rapids, Michigan, papers, or any other papers in the states, to convince the afflicted that it is the best Blood, Liver and Kidney medicine on earth. I feel like a new man. Have lived here over forty years. J. M. M. VERNON, Grand Rapids, Mich.

WOODBURY'S FACIAL SOAP.

FOR FAT FOLKS.

Dr. Edison's FAMOUS PILLS AND BANDS AND OBESITY FRUIT SALT reduce your weight without dieting; cures the causes of obesity, such as dyspepsia, rheumatism, nervousness, catarrh, kidney troubles, keeps you healthy, and beautifies the complexion.

CHICAGO LETTERS. I again write you to say I have lost 13 pounds, making 45 pounds less in weight by using 4 bottles of Dr. Edison's Obesity Pills and wearing his Obesity Bands.

Very truly yours, Charles H. Kpa, Prof. Hare, Chicago University, writes to the Chicago Herald, Sept. 4, 1892. Compulsory dieting is a waste of time and reducing their weight. When a man is troubled with rheumatism, dyspepsia, kidney trouble or nervousness the reducing of weight is slower, until the Obesity Pills have cured the disease that caused it. The pills soften and loosen the bowels in the time. I am at liberty to give a good result. I have advised Mr. Emerson with an Obesity Band and a bottle of Pills and lost 25 pounds in six weeks. Other patients have been equally successful.

Lieut. G. A. Scott, Revenue Cutter Hamlin, writes: I was once a member of the New York Cavalry. Three years ago I weighed 150 pounds, but after using Dr. Edison's Obesity Pills and Bands I reduced to 100 pounds and easily kept this weight. I saw how much other correspondents at your valuable papers were benefited and wished to give the Dr. a testimonial.

Dr. Edison's Obesity Fruit Salt is the best and simplest remedy for regulating the action of the liver that has been discovered. The fruit formula on the label of the Fruit Salt shows their value to sufferers from excessive fat or flesh.

Sold by Druggists.

Band measures at number 1, 2, 2. Price $2.50 to 25 inches, and 10 cents extra for each additional inch.
